Killer's disturbing past 'not known'

TWO prisons that held murderer Anthony Rice were unaware that he was a convicted child sex offender, an inquest heard. Neither Grendon nor Leyhill Open prison knew that Rice had convictions for a serious sexual assault on a five-year-old girl in 1975.

The lack of complete records emerged on the fourth day of the inquest into the death of Naomi Bryant.

Rice stabbed and strangled Miss Bryant, 40, at her home in Rowlings Road, Weeke, Winchester in August 2005. He was jailed for life in 2006.

David Durrant, the then-head of lifers at Leyhill, said Rice was at the open prison near Bristol between 2002 and 2004.

He told the inquest yesterday that there were problems with Mappa, multi-agency public protection arrangements, the framework set up to manage violent offenders. It should involve the police, probation, prison service and other agencies. Mr Durrant said: "We had a mixed response from Mappa. Some engaged with us. Some, it was a real struggle. Some we didn't know were taking place. It was inconsistent from our perspective."

He said since the murder there was better monitoring of potentially high-risk offenders such as Rice.

In 2004 Rice moved to the Elderfield hostel in Otterbourne near Winchester. About nine months later he met Miss Bryant. She was dead a few days later. The inquest, before a six-men and four-women jury, is due to resume on Monday.

ANOTHER lucky reader has enjoyed a big cash prize thanks to the Daily Echo.

Mrs Soane has won £2,150 after coming closest to Finding the Ball.

However, there was no jackpot winner, with the top prize now growing to a remarkable £30,000. See tomorrow's Daily Echo.
